TAKES BIG DOSE OF STRYCHNINE

James Kindred's Dead Body Is Found in His Room in Lodging House.

Weariness of life, James Kindred, a mining man of Davenport, Ia., and latterly of Wells, Nev., committed suicide some time during Thursday night in a room in the lodging house known as Vic's place, 65 Orpheum avenue. The body was found Friday forenoon, and an empty strychnine vial and a partly filled bottle of port wine gave the mute evidence of the cause of death.

The reasons for Kindred's self-destruction are not known, although it is presumed to have been due to despondency. Kindred arrived in Salt Lake from Wells, Nev., a little over two weeks ago and secured a low-priced room at the place of his death. He made few friends and took no one into his confidence.

Thursday night he gave the appearance of laboring under some mental excitement, but not sufficient to attract particular attention at the time. He asked for a higher priced room than the one he had been occupying, and was given a 75-cent room, which he paid for.

Friday forenoon, while John Powell, an employee in the house, was engaged in cleaning the rooms, he pushed open the door of the one occupied by Kindred, and found the latter lying on the bed with his face buried in the pillow, and dead.

Officers George Moore and Earl Ripley responded to the summons from the lodging house, and later the body was removed to O'Donnell's undertaking establishment.

A half-filled bottle of port wine and the empty vial labeled strychnine found lying on the bureau gave evidence of the cause of death. Kindred had apparently swallowed the strychnine, washing it down with the wine, and then went to bed to die.

Letters found among the effects of the dead man show that he leaves a widow residing in Davenport, Ia.; a son, John Kindred, living at 1730 West Eighth street, Davenport, and a daughter, Miss Mae Kindred, 131 North Pennsylvania avenue, Brookfield, Mo. Money order receipts indicated that for some time past he has been sending money to his family, and he had about $5 in his possession when he took his own life.

In view of the circumstances it was not deemed necessary to hold a coroner's inquest, and the body will be held at O'Donnell's pending advice regarding the disposition of the remains from the family, who have been notified by telephone.

MAILED POISON HIMSELF

Young San Francisco Electrician Believed to Have Chosen Unusual Method of Suicide.

San Francisco, Dec. 4.—Falling to discover a motive for the murder of Henry J. Boas, the young electrician who died early yesterday from the effects of a poison believed to be strychnine, the police of San Francisco and San Jose, after a thorough investigation of the dead man's antecedents, now incline to the belief that he secured the poison and mailed it to himself at his office. According to the theory, Boas wrote the letter directing the use of the enclosed powders as a remedy for indigestion, and later, upon its receipt, exhibited both the letter and powders to at least two of his friends.

It is admitted, however, that if Boas contemplated to commit suicide, he chose a most unusual method of accomplishing his end, and laid his plans in such a manner as to make it appear that he was the victim of a mysterious murder. In support of their contention, the police have the evidence of the dead man's friends and relatives, who admit that he was in the habit of deceiving people as to occurrences of his earlier life, and that while he claimed to have been a student at Yale, and spoke familiarly of men and matters at that institution, he had never been outside of this state, and had received no more than a grammar school education at San Jose. One of his eccentricities was the adoption of the name of Boas, while his family patronymic is Bose.

SAY— Drop in and see if we are not fully justified in making some noise about our clothing and toggery—

Take a look at our $25.00, $30.00 and $35.00
Princeton Suits and Overcoats

And tell us where you ever saw their equal. If you went to the tailor he could not fit you any better, even though he charged you double the price, and of course it goes without saying that the style, the grace of the garment and the fine appearance can not be equaled by any local tailor. Princeton garments stand pre-eminently superior to all high grade makes, and yet they are so reasonably priced that many of our customers wonder how we can sell them at so reasonable a price.

Look at Our Lines of Boys' and Children's Clothing

Take our $5.00 boys' suit, for instance, and match it, if you can. A look and an examination of our good clothes will convince you that we are justified in shouting.
